ADVICE OF RIGHTS REGARDING REVOCATION HEARING

I have been ordered to appear to address whether I am in full compliance, or to respond to a motion to revoke filed by the City, regarding a deferred prosecution, pre-trial diversion agreement, or judgment and sentence previously entered in my case.

Any statements I make regarding compliance with the previous orders of the court can be used against me, either during the disposition of my case today, or at a later hearing if the City later files a motion to revoke my deferred prosecution, pre-trial diversion agreement, or suspended sentence. I have the right to remain silent and not answer any questions pertaining to whether I have complied with the orders of the court or the pre-trial diversion agreement.

I have the right to be represented by an attorney during any hearing in which my deferred prosecution, pre-trial diversion agreement, or judgment and sentence may be modified or revoked, and if I cannot afford to hire an attorney, I have the right to have the court appoint an attorney to represent me. I can give up that right and represent myself. However, there are advantages and disadvantages of representing myself. An attorney could advise me of any defenses to the allegation that I am out of compliance. An attorney could also advise me regarding the court rules of evidence and procedure, and how those rules might benefit me in the outcome of my case. If I choose to represent myself, and the court revokes my pre-trial diversion agreement, deferred prosecution or suspended sentence, and imposes a penalty of jail or a monetary penalty, then I will not be able to appeal the decision of the court to revoke based on the fact that I represented myself ineffectively.

If I am not in full compliance with the deferred prosecution, pre-trial diversion agreement, or judgment and sentence, the court could revoke it, and if that happens, the court could order that I serve time in jail or pay additional penalties. In some cases, jail time is mandatory. If I am not currently in compliance, I may ask the court to grant me more time to come into compliance, however only the court decides whether to grant me more time.

During a motion to revoke hearing, the City will be required to prove my failure to comply with the orders of the court or the pre-trial diversion agreement by a preponderance of the evidence. I will be able to cross-examine any City witnesses and present my own evidence. The judge will decide whether the City has proven by a preponderance of the evidence that I am out of compliance.

If I admit that I am not in compliance with the orders of the court or the pre-trial diversion agreement, the court may enter an order of revocation today and impose jail time and monetary penalties.

I have read this advice of rights document and I have no questions.
